of investigative reporting had a positive influence on the attitude and outlook of victims of traumatic injuries, the victims tell their story more fully and faithfully, become more up and coming in filming, and also become more willing to tell additional stories to the investigative reporters or to encourage others to tell their stories, too, which makes the investigative report more effective and positive. In conclusion, if the investigative reporting works the way it should, it results in a win-win situation both for the investigative reporters and also for the victims of traumatic injuries.
